

GENERAL ROBERT E. LEE

BY DANIEL DOS SANTOS

Many historians consider Robert E. Lee the greatest general of the Civil War. His military genius, although hampered by lack of men and material, was a principal factor in keeping the Confederacy war effort alive. Lee was idolized by his soldiers and the people of the South, eventually winning the reluctant respect of the North as well.

In this striking portrait, artist Daniel Dos Santos brings to life one of the most significant figures of the Civil War. This image is not directly related to any battle, but rather a study in the individual, and the complexity which made him the quintessential hero of the South.

DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR.

Although I am not old enough to have seen him during his lifetime, I hold the life work of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. in high regard. It would be easy to paint a “heroic” portrait of Dr. King giving one of his great speeches, but I wanted to portray his personality over his deeds,” says Dan. “I handled this piece as if I had been asked to paint his portrait. I knew he had a number of images of Gandhi about his home and chose to incorporate this detail. Hopefully, what I’ve created is a tribute to a force of politics, preaching and praise—as well as Martin, the man.”
